U. S. MARINES KEEP GOING

Extend Their Gains and Capture Prisoners—German Machine Guns Turned on Former Owners.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
With the American Army at the Marne, June 7.—(8 p. m.)—American Marines who are standing with the French between the German armies and Paris, have extended their gains of Thursday. They have advanced to a depth of nearly two and one-half miles over a front of about six miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, capturing several villages and 300 prisoners. Not one of the Marines has been taken prisoner.

A railway station on the right wing of the line was the scene of the most gruelling fighting. There the men fell fast, but I hear that the enemy's losses were very great.

At no time nor on any other front has the enemy massed such a formidable array of machine guns. In fact, the fighting developed into a machine gun duel in the open.

Our troops drove back the Germans steadily, despite the hot fire from batteries of Boche machine guns.

The Germans took cover behind large boulders and were thus able to check our men somewhat, but as fast as a blonde head showed it was picked off by an American sharpshooter.

It was like the old time Indian fighting, with the men hiding behind trees and stones. A majority of our men were compelled to depend entirely upon the tall grass and the growing wheat for screening purposes. As the wind would flatten the grass and the grain, thus exposing the Americans, the Germans would open up with continuous volleys.

The village of Boursches, three miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, was taken by a company of American Marines that had seen action in Haiti.

When the officers of another company were killed or disabled a young corporal took command, rallying the men. He led them in a brilliant charge right up to the muzzles of the German machine guns where the German gunners were either killed or captured.

Some of the captured machine guns were afterwards turned against the Germans.

The fighting during the two American assaults on Thursday lasted nine hours. The first attack began at 3 o'clock in the morning and continued for three hours, while the second started at 5 in the afternoon and lasted for six hours. During the interval there was skirmishing. Our men found heaps of German dead as they advanced.

Crack Prussian troops massed machine guns and one pounder cannon and made desperate efforts to break up the American attacks, putting down a terrific barrage.

The most of the Americans, who were wounded were struck by machine gun bullets and flying shrapnel. Our casualties, however, were slight compared with those of the Germans.

After storming the village of Torcy (just west of Boursches) and capturing the machine guns amidst the village ruins, the marines retired, establishing their line just outside of Torcy. This movement was made because the order for the battle did not call for the capture of Torcy. In their enthusiasm the marines swept forward farther than they had been ordered to go.

A salient was established there, however, and today Torcy lies at the mercy of our men.

During the fighting an American gunner captured three Boches and started back with them. Twelve others threw up their hands and surrendered voluntarily. All joined the procession. The Americans howled with delight as they saw the sergeant with his cocked rifle leading his fifteen captives into the line.

"You had better try to hike to Berlin and try to hypnotize Kaiser Bill," yelled one husky doughboy.

On the spot the doughy sergeant was nicknamed "The Hun Hypnotist."

Not only did the Americans capture villages in their dash on the Marne but they advanced over a long strip of the Paris-Chateau Thierry highway. Nearly a score of German machine guns fell into our hands.

Many of the Marines late Thursday were enjoying the first sleep in four days and nights lying in the woods where the trees screened them from enemy snipers and airplanes. At 4:45 in the afternoon they were awakened and given the order "to go over top" at five on the dot. The men sprang to their feet, adjusted their equipment and showed themselves to be happy as larks to get a second chance at the Germans in one day. Our men in the trenches have proved themselves to be gluttons for fighting.

The attack was skillfully organized. The men went out across a wheat field. Through the tall, waving grain they moved at the "double quick." They hit the enemy crouching like football players, the fixed bayonets forming a line of gleaming steel in the late afternoon sunshine.

The roar of battle resounded around them with machine guns spitting and the shells bursting with continuous crashes.

Our left and center found it easier going than the marines on the right. The soldiers of the sea ran into a veritable wall of machine guns instead of the customary "nests." These deadly weapons were strung across a clearing in a solid line, side by side. But despite the rain of bullets the Germans were swept on in waves of olive drab. After hours of hard fighting the Germans were crushed.

U-BOATS STILL EVADE CAPTURE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, June 8.—Despite various reassuring statements that the submarine menace is under control the German submarines now operating off the Atlantic coast continue a very serious menace to navigation. Up to the present time they have succeeded in keeping well out of the way of the pursuing squadrons which have been combing the seas for them. And, although shots have been exchanged with them, it can be stated positively that not a single one of the enemy undersea craft has either been sunk or captured. Stories making this claim, widely circulated, are based entirely on rumor which when traced to its sources fails to make good the assertion.

Sifting down all of the information which it is possible to obtain it appears that there are four or six of these submarines operating off the coast. They are believed to have a base on some of the innumerable coral islets off the entrance to the Gulf of Mexico or in the vicinity of the West Indies where their secret store of oil and fuels are hidden. These submarines are all equipped with wireless so they can keep in touch with the American vessels which are searching for them. And, that they are endeavoring to get American transports is considered a certainty.

CONFERENCE ON BARGE TERMINAL

A conference of the barge canal terminal committees of the Poughkeepsie, Yonkers, Kingston and Newburgh Chambers of Commerce was held at Poughkeepsie's chamber office on Thursday. City Treasurer James E. Canfield presided. Mayor Canfield attended the session.

The sum of $150,000 will be allowed by the state to the four cities for the purchase of sites for the proposed terminals and the members of the committee met to receive reports from the various cities as to the cost of terminal sites in the various cities.

Yonkers has an option on a site for $50,000, Newburgh $40,000, Poughkeepsie about $50,000 and Kingston's former option on land has expired. When the matter was taken up here a very satisfactory offer had been made by the U. S. D. R. and as the option has expired Mr. Canfield was requested to again have the matter taken up with the railroad and be ready to report at a meeting to be held in Newburgh next Wednesday afternoon.

Following the Newburgh meeting the members of the committee will journey to Albany to have a meeting with State Engineer Williams at which time it is expected that the matter of the terminals will be finally determined and action at once taken toward working on the terminals.

Six Cent Fare in Poughkeepsie.

A six cent fare has been granted to the Poughkeepsie and Wappinger Falls Railway by the public service commission, conditioned upon the making of extensive improvements by the company. The public service board requires more double tracks, new wires and 20 minute service on the south side of Poughkeepsie.

They Want Games Here.

The St. Peter's A. A. of Poughkeepsie, would like to arrange baseball games with any team ranging from 18 to 20. We would like to play in Kingston on the Fourth of July, on any Sunday. I would like to hear from any fast team as soon as possible. Joe Moran, 101 Main street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

wounded by the French was one of the most impressive features of the war, especially the tribute of the children who stood at rigid attention and saluted in the way their daddies had taught them. Girls and women threw kisses and flowers at the ambulances. The drivers and patients looked as though they had been caked with flour so thick was the white dust which arose in clouds from the highways. A long dry spell had made the dust worse than usual and it was chucked into thick waves by the tread of feet and the wheels of the wagons and artillery.

As the dust coated ambulances moved in long trains along the road to Paris the trip was converted into a triumphal procession. In every hamlet and village and town there was an ovation. The suburbs of Paris echoed with cheers as the American wounded were borne through. Women and children lined the streets with cries of encouragement as they caught sight of bandaged heads and bared bloody shoulders. Even the sight of a pair of dusty, homelike trench shoes sticking from the end of an ambulance was enough to move and stir the people.

The ground taken from the enemy is a slight index of the achievement of our troops. When they joined the battle line they found the French lagged from lack of sleep after the strenuous fighting in the face of the terrific German offensive. The Americans' Herculean efforts, when they reached the firing line, was one of the remarkable troop movements of the war and it not only stemmed the enemy but hurled him back.

TROLLEY CARS RUN LIKE BARBER SHOPS

In France You Get a Serial Number Before You Board a Car in Rush Hours, so There is No Crowding or Discomfort.

On Active Service with the American Expeditionary Force.

May 7.—Tonight we were going to go up to the "Y," where some of the colored men are giving some southern melodies, but it is raining pretty hard and so I will write. I am well as usual, only a bit sleepy and will hit the hay early for there are plenty of men coming in and it means work with a capital "W" for us.

We heard there were "beaucoup" troops due yesterday so all the boys got out yesterday after chow and worked getting the barracks ready for them. Just to show us how they could fool us they did not come last night but may come today. They say they are New Yorkers. I hope so for I may know some of them. We had a regular time hustling bedding until about 12 o'clock at night. Everyone turned out, stevedores, office hands and officers, and we were finished hot coffee and toast was served in the mess hall. When they shouted "Hit the deck" this morning I was a bit sleepy, but you know we are not used to late hours any more, so 12 o'clock is pretty late for us.

It is raining today, one of those cold, damp days like we get in October. There has been a drizzle all day long, with a chilly wind, but it looks as though tomorrow will be clear.

I am having a pretty good time here when I am off duty. Don't think because I am in the army I never get any time off. Those who have a good record are given quite some liberty and I am able to visit friends here quite often. I am trying to pick up some French for I never will get a better opportunity. Every Sunday I have a lesson (one hour), and find it quite easy and interesting, too. Afterward we go for a walk about town or have some music, dancing, etc., and time goes fly. The people over here eat at about 5 o'clock so it is time to return to camp by the time dinner is finished. We usually eat with friends at their house.

I encountered a very interesting and, to me, new idea Sunday when we were going over to the house. It was about 2:30 and the rush hour on the trolley cars so we waited on the corner for our car but found we had to have a numbered ticket to get aboard.

A Canadian soldier who knew the ropes showed us the way the idea works. At the main transfer points or junctions where the trainways meet is a booth where tickets to the different lines are placed and as you arrive you help yourself to a ticket which is numbered serially and you are allowed to board the car according to your number. No. 29 doesn't get on until the numbers ahead are on; the conductor, a woman, calls off the numbers as the passengers get on. Some idea and it works well too. No pushing or jamming to beat each other on. It is the first time I have seen a woman fare after you are on the car.

I heard today that Walter Baisden is stationed at our Base Hospital near me and I may get a chance to look him up. It is the big hospital you hear so much about and which is described so often in the papers as being one of the largest and finest here. I have been there but it was several weeks ago. I am going to find out for sure if he is there.

I got the papers quite regular but, of course, they are 3 or 4 weeks old, but it doesn't matter. It is news to me.

THINKS BOYS MUST ALL BE GONE NOW

Private Alcon, "Somewhere in France, Writes that Fellows Must be About all Gone from Kingston by This Time.

"A barber in the army can make a bunch of money if he only wants to work, but a majority of them in the army would sooner rest," writes Vincent D. Cashin, Company B, 8th Machine Gun Battalion, American Expeditionary Forces, to his friend, Clarence Ryan, the Strand barber. Private Cashin writes that he arrived over there safely and had a pretty good trip. "We passed through England, also stayed there for a few days to rest, and then went to France. England is a very nice place, but I don't care much about this place. We were traveling for quite a while after leaving the boat and you can guess how that was done. I suppose the boys still come home from Camp Dix as regular as usual. I met Sam Mann there at Camp Merritt before I left and he was telling me how hard he had it. Let some of those fellows come over here and they will know what soldiering is."

Private Cashin also asked about many of the boys he knew when home and wrote that he was enjoying good health.

Mr. Ryan also received a letter from Bernard Alcon, 3rd Company, 2nd M. M. Regiment, 3rd American Expeditionary Forces, in which he sent best regards to all the fellows and that they were having some good weather over there, and that he was beginning to enjoy the country. He adds: "The fellows must be about all gone from Kingston by this time."

OUR PRIMARY CLASS AT CAMP WADSWORTH

Hot Weather, But They Expect to Get Used to it—Plenty to Eat And the Only Famine is in Newspapers.

Co. F, 51st Pioneer Infantry, Camp Wadsworth, S. C., June 4.—Have not as yet received any newspapers. Borrowed one from Ed. Perry the past few days. This place is surely in the sunny south. Last Sunday it was about 120 in the shade. It makes a person think about the cold days we had last winter when we look at a thermometer in the sun and wish we had some. The heat is something awful some days. I don't think any of us will kick about the heat if we ever reach Kingston again.

We had a very severe electrical storm yesterday afternoon. We were out drilling when the wind started to blow the dust and we had some little sand storms. We were brought in from the field and sent to our tents to tighten them down before the storm broke. The rain came down in torrents. We also had some hailstones as large as marbles. Sometimes the wind blows some of the tents over during a storm.

We are beginning to drill now. Were out yesterday for about four hours and today for about six hours. It was fairly cool today. We have fine officers who realize that we are not used to such warm weather and so they are lenient with us.

We have plenty to eat. This evening we had the following for supper: Macaroni and tomato soup, potatoes, an onion, cheese, bread and jam, pineapple and coffee. Sometimes on warm days we have cold tea or lemonade.

We received some of our equipment last night. By the last of the week will probably have our uniforms.

The army life is a fine thing for a young man. We would all enjoy it more here if it was only cooler; of course, if we stay here any length of time we will be used to it.

I see by the papers they are going to have another big draft the last of this month. I wonder if they will send them down here from Kingston? If they do and we are still here we will have a small town of Kingston people here.

We got up every morning at 5:30 and are all through for the day after noon, which is over about 6:30 in the evening.

There are band concerts here during the day and evening. There is usually something going on at the Y. M. C. A. every evening. Some evenings moving pictures and others singing.

We have tomorrow afternoon off for recreation. We are learning to do lots of things that very few of us ever did at home. We have to catch a turn in sweeping up the tent. We make our own bed and wash our own mess kit. It will seem funny now to have to do anything like that when we get back home. Why, Heine, who never shaved himself, is learning to shave. He says he is enjoying the army life, but he is so heavy that he does not enjoy drilling in the hot sun.

Today we were all put in squads according to our size.

Heine and I are still in the same tent but will be shifted shortly and each squad put in a tent.

The other day I had to sweep the floor. I went to duck under a stove-pipe but instead of coming up on the other side I came up and hit the stove which being slightly harder than my head, broke the skin on top. They shaved the hair from around the cut and took me to one of the dispensaries where they patched it up. It is getting better now.

Many of us have sore arms and necks from sunburn, also from the vaccination which we got.

First along they had taps at 11 o'clock, but now it is at 10 o'clock. Some nights it seems as though we just get to sleep when we have to get up.

This evening there is a boxing contest up the street. Quite a few of the boys have come up to see it. The nights here are quite cool. The first night in camp the fellows in our tent thought they would sleep on top of the covers but before morning we were all under the covers.

As near as I can find out all the Ulster county boys are in the 51st Pioneer Infantry.

It is now near nine o'clock, so will close for this time. Best regards to all at the office, from Heine and myself.

GENE.

CANFIELD APPROVES TROLLEY ORDINANCE

Mayor Canfield has approved the amended ordinance adopted by the city fathers at the regular monthly session Tuesday evening, allowing the trolley road to ask the public service commission to increase trolley fares from five to six cents.

When the franchise was given the trolley roads it fixed the fare at five cents, and under a ruling by the courts the public service commission has not granted permission to increase fares.

With this obstacle removed by the consent of the city fathers and the mayor the trolley road can now take the matter up with the public service commission.

WAR AT A GLANCE

The mixed Franco-American forces that rolled the Germans back in the fierce fighting northwest of Chateau Thierry on the Marne front have proved just as valiant in holding their gains as they were in making them.

Powerful counter assaults were driven home by the Germans in that sector but they were smashed by the Allied fire and the attackers were flung back to their old positions leaving the field covered with dead and dying.

Meanwhile the French and Americans continue to extend their gains and fighting still rages over a large portion of the western flank of the Marne salient.

From the Ourcq to the Marne the French have driven home vigorous thrusts which advanced their lines.

The gains scored by the Franco-American forces during the past two days were made on the most vital part of the battle front—along the Paris-Chateau Thierry road and to the north of this highway where the German line extends nearest to Paris.

The Americans' advance is now reckoned at about two and one-half miles over a front of six miles and the attacks were delivered in the face of the most determined resistance.

All the Allied countries are ringing with praise for the gallant American Marines who plunged into the battle with the valor of seasoned veterans.

The situation looked more favorable for the Allies today than at any other time since the Germans began their drive on the Aisne-Marne field thirteen days ago.

The toll on the Picardy and Flanders fronts continues.

CARNIVAL CLOSES THIS EVENING

The carnival at Athletic Field which has been playing this week under the auspices of the P. O. S. A. closes its engagement this evening. The carnival shows have pleased the crowds that have attended and it is said to be one of the best carnival companies that has visited the city in a long time. Preparations are being made for an exceptionally good program to bring the week's engagement to a close tonight. It is expected there will be a record breaking attendance.

Auto Ran Away.

Friday afternoon an auto owned by Harry DeWitt of Cottekill which was standing in front of the High School ran away down the driveway hitting the large stone gate post at the entrance which caused it to rebound and run across the street crashing into the Ford delivery truck owned by Alonzo Terpening which was standing in front of Turk's candy store on Broadway. Both cars escaped with light damage.

U. S. MARINES KEEP GOING

Extend Their Gains and Capture Prisoners—German Machine Guns Turned on Former Owners.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
With the American Army at the Marne, June 7.—(8 p. m.)—American Marines who are standing with the French between the German armies and Paris, have extended their gains of Thursday. They have advanced to a depth of nearly two and one-half miles over a front of about six miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, capturing several villages and 300 prisoners. Not one of the Marines has been taken prisoner.

A railway station on the right wing of the line was the scene of the most cruel fighting. There the men fell fast, but I hear that the enemy's losses were very great.

At no time nor on any other front has the enemy massed such a formidable array of machine guns. In fact, the fight has developed into a machine gun duel in the open.

Our troops drove back the Germans steadily, despite the hot fire from batteries of Boche machine guns.

The Germans look over behind large boulders and were thus able to check our men somewhat, but as fast as a blonde head showed it was picked off by an American sharpshooter.

It was like the old time Indian fighting, with the men hiding behind trees and stones. A majority of our men were compelled to depend entirely upon the tall grass and the growing wheat for screening purposes. As the wind would flatten the grass and the grain, thus exposing the Americans, the Germans would open up with continuous volleys.

The village of Boursches, three miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, was taken by a company of American Marines that had seen action in Haiti.

When the officers of another company were killed or disabled a young corporal took command, rallying the men. He led them in a brilliant charge right up to the muzzles of the German machine guns, where the German gunners were either killed or captured.

Some of the captured machine guns were afterwards turned against the Germans.

The fighting during the two American assaults on Thursday lasted nine hours. The first attack began at 4 o'clock in the morning and continued for three hours. While the second started at 5 in the afternoon and lasted for six hours. During the interval there was skirmishing. Our men found heaps of German dead as they advanced.

Crack Prussian troops massed machine guns and one pounder cannon and made desperate efforts to break up the American attacks, putting down a terrific barrage.

The most of the Americans who were wounded were struck by machine gun bullets and flying shrapnel. Our casualties, however, were slight compared with those of the Germans.

After storming the village of Torcy (just west of Boursches) and capturing the machine guns amidst the village ruins, the marines retired, establishing their line just outside of Torcy. This movement was made because the order for the battle did not call for the capture of Torcy. In their enthusiasm the marines went forward farther than they had been ordered to go.

A salient was established there, however, and today Torcy lies at the mercy of our men.

During the fighting an American runner, sergeant, captured three Boches and started back with them. Twelve others threw up their hands and surrendered voluntarily. All joined the procession. The Americans howled with delight as they saw the sergeant with his cocked rifle leading his fifteen captives into the line.

"You had better try to hike to Berlin and try to hypnotize Kaiser Bill!" yelled one husky doughboy.

On the spot the doughy sergeant was nicknamed "The Hun Hypnotist."

Not only did the Americans capture villages in their dash on the Marne, but they advanced over a long strip of the Paris-Chateau Thierry highway. Nearly a score of German machine guns fell into our hands.

Many of the Marines late Thursday were enjoying the first sleep in four days and nights lying in the woods where the trees screened them from enemy snipers and airplanes. At 4:45 in the afternoon they were awakened and given the order "to go over top" to their feet. The men sprang to their feet, adjusted their equipment and started themselves to be happy as larks to get a second chance at the Germans in one day. Our men in action have proved themselves to be gluttons for fighting.

The attack was skillfully organized. The men swung out across a wheat field. Through the tall, waving grain they moved at the "double" like football players, the fixed bayonets forming a line of gleaming steel in the late afternoon sunshine.

The roar of battle resounded around them with machine guns spitting and the shells bursting with continuous crashes.

Our left and center found it easier going than the marines on the right. The soldiers of the sea ran into a veritable wall of machine guns instead of the customary "nets." These deadly weapons were strung across a clearing in a solid line, side by side. Despite the rain of bullets the Marines went on in waves of olive drab. After hours of hard fighting the Germans were crushed.

The bonanza paid the American enemy but buried him back.

U-BOATS STILL EVADE CAPTURE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, June 8.—Despite various reassuring statements that the submarine menace is under control the German submarines now operating off the Atlantic coast continue a very serious menace to navigation. Up to the present time they have succeeded in keeping well out of the way of the pursuing squadrons which have been combing the seas for them. And, although shots have been exchanged with them, it can be stated positively that not a single one of the enemy undersea craft has either been sunk or captured. Stories making this claim widely circulated, are based entirely on rumor which when traced to its sources fails to make good the assertion.

Sitting down all of the information which it is possible to obtain, it appears that there are four or six of these submarines operating off the coast. They are believed to have a base on some of the numerous coral reefs off the entrance to the Gulf of Mexico or in the vicinity of the West Indies where their reserve store of oils and fuels are hidden. These submarines are all equipped with wireless so they can keep in touch with the American vessels which are searching for them. And, that they are endeavoring to get American transports is considered a certainty.

CONFERENCE ON BARGE TERMINAL

A conference of the barge canal terminal committees of the Poughkeepsie, Yonkers, Kingston, and Newburgh Chambers of Commerce, was held at Poughkeepsie's chamber office on Thursday. City Treasurer James E. Canfield represented Mayor Canfield at the session.

The sum of $150,000 will be allocated by the state to the four cities for the purchase of sites for the proposed terminals and the members of the committee met to receive reports from the various cities as to the cost of terminal sites in the various cities.

Yonkers has an option on a site for $50,000. Newburgh $40,000. Poughkeepsie about $50,000 and Kingston's former option on land has expired. When the matter was taken up here a very satisfactory offer had been made by the U. S. R. R. and as the option has expired, Mr. Canfield was requested to again have the matter taken up with the railroad and be ready to report at a meeting to be held in Newburgh next Wednesday afternoon.

Following the Newburgh meeting the members of the committee will journey to Albany to have a meeting with State Engineer Williams at which time it is expected that the matter of sites will be finally determined and action at once taken toward working on the terminals.

Six Cent Fare in Poughkeepsie.

A six cent fare has been granted to the Poughkeepsie and Wapping Falls Railway by the public service commission, conditioned upon the making of extensive improvements by the company. The public service board requires more double tracks, new wires and 20 minute service on the south side of Poughkeepsie.

They Want Games Here.

The St. Peter's A. A. of Poughkeepsie would like to arrange baseball games with a team ranging from 18 to 20. We would like to play in Kingston on the Poughkeepsie, on any Sunday. I would like to hear from any fast team as soon as possible. Joe Moran, 101 Main street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

wounded by the French was one of the most impressive features of the day, especially the tribute of the children who stood at rigid attention and saluted them as they passed.

They threw kisses and flowers at the Americans. The drivers and patients looked as though they had been caked with flour so thick was the white dust which arose in clouds from the highways. A long dry spell had made the dust worse than usual and it was churned into thick waves by the tread of feet and the wheels of the wagons and artillery.

As the dust coated ambulances moved in long trains along the road to Paris the trip was converted into a triumphal procession. In every hamlet and village and town there was an ovation. The suburbs of Paris echoed with cheers as the American wounded were borne through.

Women and children lined the streets with cries of encouragement as they caught sight of bandaged heads and bared bloody shoulders. Even the sight of a pair of dusty, hobnailed trench shoes sticking from the end of an ambulance was enough to move and stir the people.

The ground taken from the enemy is a slight index of the achievement of our troops. When they joined the battle line they found the French tagged from lack of sleep after the strenuous fighting in the face of the terrible German offensive.

The Americans' Herculean efforts, when good weather overtook them, was beginning to enjoy the country. The fellows must be about Kingston by this, on the road between Saugerties and Glazco.

TROLLEY CARS RUN LIKE BARBER SHOPS

In France You Get a Serial Number Before You Board a Car in Rush Hours, so There is No Crowding or Discomfort.

On Active Service with the American Expeditionary Force.

May 7.—Tonight we were going to go up to the "Y," where some of the colored men are giving some southern melodies, but it is raining pretty hard and so I will write. I am well as usual, only a bit sleepy and will hit the hay early for there are plenty of men coming in and it means work with a capital "W" for us.

We heard there were "beaucoup" troops down yesterday so all the boys got out yesterday after chow and worked getting the barracks ready for them. Just to show us how they could fool us they did not come last night but may come today. They say they are New Yorkers. I hope so for I may know some of them. We had a regular time lasting bedding until about 12 o'clock at night. Everyone turned out, stewards, office hands, and officers, and when we were finished hot coffee and toast was served in the mess hall. When they shouted "Hit the deck" this morning I was a bit sleepy, but you know we are not used to late hours any more, so 12 o'clock is pretty late for us.

It is raining today, one of those cold, damp days like we get in October. There has been a drizzle all day long, with a chilly wind, but it looks as though tomorrow will be clear.

I am having a pretty good time here when I am off duty. Don't think because I am in the army I never get any time off. Those who have a good record are given quite a lot of liberty and I am able to visit friends here quite often. I am trying to pick up some French for I never will get a better opportunity. Every Sunday I have a lesson (one hour), and find it quite easy and interesting, too. Afterward we go for a walk about town or have some music, dancing, etc., and time does fly. The people over here act at about 8 o'clock so it is time to return to camp by the time dinner is finished. We usually eat with friends at their house.

I encountered a very interesting incident, no new idea Sunday when we were going over to the house. It was about 2:30 and the rush hour on the trolley cars so we waited on the corner for our car but found we had to leave a number of tickets to get aboard.

A Canadian soldier who knew the ropes showed us the way the idea works. At the main transfer points or junctions where the trainways meet is a booth where tickets to the different lines are placed and as you arrive you help yourself to a ticket which is numbered according to your number.

No. 29 ahead and on the conductor's passenger car on some idea and it works well too. No pushing or jamming to beat each other out. It is first come, first served, and you pay your fare after you are on the car.

I heard today that Walter Baisden is stationed at our Base Hospital near me and I may get a chance to look him up. It is the big hospital you hear so much about and which is described so often in the papers as being one of the largest and finest here. I have been there but it is several weeks ago. I am going to find out for sure if he is there.

I got the papers quite regular but, of course, they are 3 or 4 weeks old, but it doesn't matter. It is news to me.

FRED.

THINKS BOYS MUST ALL BE GONE NOW

Private Alton. "Somewhere in France, Writes that Fellows Must be About all Gone from Kingston by This Time.

"A barber in the army can make a bunch of money if he only wants to work, but a majority of them in the army would sooner rest," writes Vincent D. Cashin, Company B, 8th Maine, 3rd Division, American Expeditionary Forces, to his friend, Clarence Ryan, the Strand barber.

Private Cashin writes that he arrived over there safely and had a pretty good trip. "We passed through England, also stayed there for a few days to rest, and then went to France. England is a very nice place, but I don't care much about this place. We were traveling for quite a while after leaving the boat and you can guess how that was done. I suppose the boys still come home from Camp Dix as regular as usual. I met Sam Mann there at Camp Merritt before I left and he was telling me how hard he had it. Let some of those fellows come over here and they will know what soldiering is."

Private Cashin also asked about many of the boys he knew when home and wrote that he was enjoying good health.

Mr. Ryan also received a letter from Bernard Alcon, 3rd Company, 2nd M. Regiment, 3rd C. American Expeditionary Forces, in which he sent best regards to all the fellows.

The and that they were having some played by the Catskill Hardware Company, was injured Thursday afternoon when a motorcycle he was riding collided with an automobile on the road between Saugerties and Glazco.

OUR PRIMARY CLASS AT CAMP WADSWORTH

Hot Weather, But They Expect to Get Used to It—Plenty to Eat and the Only Famine is in Newspapers.

Co. F, 51st Pioneer Infantry, Camp Wadsworth, S. C., June 4.—Have not as yet received any newspapers. Borrowed one from Ed. Perry the past few days. This place is surely in the sunny south. Last Sunday it was about 120 in the shade. It makes a person think about the cold days we had last winter when we look at a thermometer in the sun and wish we had some. The heat is something awful some days. I don't think any of us will kick about the heat if we ever reach Kingston again.

We had a very severe electrical storm yesterday afternoon. We were out drilling when the wind started to blow the dust and we had some little sand storms. We were brought in from the field and sent to our tents to lighten them down before the storm broke. The rain came down in torrents. We also had some hailstones as large as marbles. Sometimes the wind blows some of the tents over during a storm.

We are beginning to drill now. Were out yesterday for about four hours and today for about six hours. It was fairly cool today. We have fine officers who realize that we are not used to such warm weather and so they are lenient with us.

We have plenty to eat. This evening we had the following for supper: Macaroni and tomato soup, potatoes, an onion, cheese, bread and jam, pineapple and coffee. Sometimes on warm days we have cold tea or lemonade.

We received some of our equipment last night. By the last of the week will probably have our uniforms.

The army life is a fine thing for a young man. We would all enjoy it more here if it was only cooler; of course, if we stay here any length of time we will be used to it.

I see by the papers they are going to have another big draft the last of this month. I wonder if they will send them down here from Kingston? If they do and we are still here we will have a small town of Kingston people here.

We get up every morning at 5:30 and are all through for the day after mass, which is over about 6:30 in the evening.

There are band concerts here during the day and evening. There is usually something going on at the Y. M. C. A. every evening. Some evenings moving pictures and others for recreation.

We are learning to do lots of things that very few of us ever did at home. We have to take a turn in sweeping up the tent. We make our own bed and wash our own mess kit. It will seem funny not to have to do anything like that when we get back home. Why, Heinrich never shaved himself, is learning to shave. He says he is enjoying the army life, but he is so heavy that he does not enjoy drilling in the hot sun.

Today we were all put in squads according to our size.

Heinrich and I are still in the same tent but will be shifted shortly and each squad put in a tent.

The other day while over at the personnel, I had to sweep the floor. I went to duck under a stove-pipe but I came up and hit the stove which being slightly harder than my head, broke the skin on top. They shaved the hair from around the cut, and took me to one of the dispensaries where they patched it up. It is getting better now.

Many of us have sore arms and neck from sunburn, also from the vaccination which we got.

First along they had taps at 11 o'clock, but now it is at 10 o'clock. Some nights it seems as though we just get to sleep when we have to get up.

This evening there is a boxing contest up the street. Quite a few of the boys have gone up to see it. The nights here are quite cool. The first night in camp the fellows in our tent thought they would sleep on top of the covers but before morning we were all under the covers.

As near as I can find out all the Ulster county boys are in the 51st Pioneer Infantry.

It is now near nine o'clock, so will close for this time. Best regards to all at the office, from Heinrich and myself.

CANFIELD APPROVES TROLLEY ORDINANCE

Mayor Canfield has approved the amended ordinance adopted by the city fathers at the regular monthly session Tuesday evening, allowing the trolley road to ask the public service commission to increase trolley fares from five to six cents.

When the franchise was given the trolley roads it fixed the fare at five cents, and under a ruling by the courts the public service commission could not grant permission to increase fares.

With this obstacle removed by the consent of the city fathers and the mayor the trolley road can now take the matter up with the public service commission.

WAR AT A GLANCE

The mixed Franco-American forces that rolled the Germans back in the fierce fighting northwest of Chateau Thierry on the Marne front have proved just as valiant in holding their gains as they were in making them.

Powerful counter assaults were driven home by the Germans in that sector but they were smashed by the Allied fire and the attackers were flung back to their old positions leaving the field covered with dead and dying.

Meanwhile the French and Americans continue to extend their gains and fighting still rages over a large portion of the western flank of the Marne salient.

From the Ouren to the Marne the French have driven home vigorous thrusts which advanced their lines.

The gains scored by the Franco-American forces during the past two days were made on the most vital part of the battle front—along the Paris-Chateau Thierry road and to the north of this highway where the German line extends nearest to Paris.

The Americans' advance is now reckoned at about two and one-half miles over a front of six miles and the attacks were delivered in the face of the most determined resistance.

All the Allied countries are ringing with praise for the gallant American Marines who plunged into the battle with the valor of seasoned veterans.

The situation looked more favorable for the Allies today than at any other time since the Germans began their drive on the Aisne-Marne field thirteen days ago.

The hull on the Picardy and Flanders fronts continues.

CARNIVAL CLOSES THIS EVENING

The carnival at Athletic Field which has been playing this week under the auspices of the P. O. S. A. closes its engagement this evening. The carnival shows have pleased the crowds that have attended and it is said to be one of the best carnivals companies that has visited the city in a long time. Preparations are being made for an exceptionally good program to bring the week's engagement to a close tonight. It is expected there will be a record breaking attendance.

Auto Ran Away.

Friday afternoon an auto owned by Harry DeWitt of Cottekill, which was "landing" in front of the High School ran away down the driveway hitting the large stone gate post at the entrance which caused it to rebound and run across the street crashing into the Ford delivery truck owned by Alonzo Terpening which was standing in front of Turk's candy store on Broadway. Both cars escaped with light damage.

WHY FUSS ABOUT BABIES NOW?

Why should we fuss about babies now? That is a question which women may well be asking, for they are busy with surgical dressings and knitting things essential to the comfort of the soldiers. But the peace of mind of the father who is soldiering in France depends on knowing that his helpless children at home are safe. And war conditions affect children in a hundred ways, although American children have escaped the more startling horrors which have darkened the lives of the children of war ravaged France and Belgium.

The Children's Bureau of the U. S.
Department of Labor has asked the men and women who are working to win the war not to forget the war time needs of all of America's children whether their fathers are fighting for their country in the trenches in France or here behind the lines.

It asks that the protection given all of America's children be increased now when the foundations of the country's future strength and democracy are being laid. For "The health of the child is the power of the nation." This war time work for children is called Children's Year.
Its goal is to save the lives of 100-000 children under five years of age during the second year of the war.
This means the saving of one-third of the three hundred thousand lives of children under five which are lost every year in the United States. Authorities agree that at least half of these deaths could be prevented if knowledge of the best modern methods of child care and facilities for following out the directions given by skilled specialists were accessible to all children instead of to comparatively few. If America can prevent even part of these deaths she will have demonstrated her ability to get for her children a better chance of life and health.

England and France have realized that work for better children is vital war work and England has proved the value of what she has done by bringing down her baby death rate to the lowest point in her history. Their achievements are an inspiration to the eleven million women of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense who have determined that 100,000 children's lives shall be saved in Children's Year. The Woman's Committee now has 9,790 local units. A constantly increasing number of these units are undertaking to forward work that will enable communities to give their children a better chance.

FOOD QUESTION BOX.

These are some of the questions women are asking on food problems.
They are answered by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture through the Ulster County Conservation Agent.
Address inquiries to the Food Question Box, Miss L. M. Stuart, No. 74
John street, Kingston, New York.

1. Isn't it unpatriotic to can rhubarb when it requires so much sugar?

There are two ways of reducing the amount of sugar usually required by rhubarb. First, neutralize some of the acid with soda by cutting the rhubarb in pieces, covering it with boiling water to which has been added a half teaspoon of soda for each quart of rhubarb, draining it and cooking or preserving it. It will then require less sweetening.

Second, use corn syrup in place of at least half of the sugar. If these two methods are followed rhubarb may be preserved with the use of very little sugar and will furnish a valuable food for next winter.

2. Can you suggest how we might make money for war work at our alumni dinner?

A clever idea has just come from Brooklyn. Each guest was asked to bring a box lunch containing no wheat, meat or sugar. These boxes were then auctioned off, one to each person, and the money used for war work. Hot coffee was provided for everyone.

3. Will a jar of fruit or vegetables spoil if there is an air space at the top?

If the product is cooked in the jar, the air is sterilized as well as the food and the jar and the fruit or vegetables will not spoil provided they have been thoroughly sterilized and the jar is properly sealed. However, if the products are cooked in the open kettle and then transferred to the sterilized jar, the air at the top of the jar is not sterilized. Therefore, when the open kettle method is used, the jars should be filled to overflowing before the sterilized cover is adjusted.

SPEED ORDINANCE TO BE ENFORCED

Chief of Police J. Allan Wood Issues Warning to Autoists That City Ordinance Must Be Observed—Fifteen Miles an Hour the Limit.

Speeding automobiles through Kingston's streets will be prohibited and Chief of Police J. Allan Wood has asked The Freeman to issue a warning to that effect. The speed limit is 15 miles an hour in Kingston, and signs indicating that fact are placed at all entrances leading to the city calling attention to the speed limit and directing vehicles to slow down to fifteen miles an hour.

It is the intention of the police department to distribute throughout the city a notice calling attention to the speed limit and that the ordinance is to be strictly enforced.

The use of the cut-out is also prohibited and if persisted in arrests will be made.

For some time past automobiles have been speeding through the city at a rate of 30 or more miles an hour endangering life and limb.

Unless the ordinance is observed arrests will follow.

And so became, as one might say, A subterfuge.

A Proud Declaration.

"I miss the well-rounded periods you used to employ in your orations."
"I may be shy on well-rounded periods," replied Senator Sorghum, "but you will notice that I come to a full stock quicker."

A Final Opinion.

"What did you think of the technique of the prima donna last night, Mrs. Compeur?"
"Why, it was all old style. It even was buttoned down the back."

The Growing Wonder of Earl Hummel's Playing!

Oh, the wonder of it! the marvel of it! That a little lad, a slender lad at that, whose ruddy golden hair has been just touched by the breezes of his twelfth summer, should have the God-given talent to play as many a violin artist of renown today would be harder to play! Those who from year to year have heard Earl Hummel play the violin, have with each added year realized the magnitude of the lad's genius. Today, it is beginning to ripen into something more than a marvelous technical skill, and perfect execution of tonality. Earl Hummel has put away childish things. He is beginning to get a vision of life, a deep, appreciating vision, which is touched with an added seriousness because of the times in which the boy is living. All this is showing in his playing. This is what, for lack of a better name, we call "temperament"; the soul in the music. And there seems nothing in the way of expressing this soul, for technical difficulties are apparently as though they were not. It seemed in hearing his play on Friday evening as though about of Johann Sebastian Bach played it, a fact which Earl recognized himself.

He played the first number on the program absolutely alone, with no accompaniment. And he made his larger and beautiful toned violin sing the song that was in the mind and heart of Johann Sebastian Bach when he wrote the Prelude from the Sixth Violin Sonata for Violin alone, with a clearness and beauty that was the wonder of every musician present, while the accompaniment to that song flowed from the same strings and bow. It was a masterly piece of musicianship.

The big thing of the evening, for the boy, however, was the Viotti Concerto in its entirety. It is an especially beautiful work, but one that would tax the skill and appreciation of any mature artist. The Moderato movement was lovely and crisp. But when he wrote the Prelude from the Sixth Violin Sonata for Violin alone, with a clearness and beauty that was the wonder of every musician present, while the accompaniment to that song flowed from the same strings and bow. It was a masterly piece of musicianship.

The performance was more than spirited, there was something virile about it. At times it became vivacious, then clean cut and crisp. But always it was the very essence of music, with perfect tonality, that fineness of tonality that stands in no awe of the limitations of the piano, but is true to itself. Earl's tone has grown in breadth and fullness, his poise and self control have greatly increased, while over all there is that indefinable something which takes hold and grips the heart of his listener. We have long since become accustomed to the lad's marvelous feats of memory. Last night the entire program was memorized.

The audience gave Earl an ovation at the close of the Concerto and he came back happy and smiling, to play with the utmost grace and beauty of flowing style, a "Rondino" by Kreisler. His interpretation of this number was especially fine.

When one reads on the program "Sarasate's 'Zapatero'," one holds their breath at the thought of the boy's attempting to play this composition requiring such exquisite delicacy, such nuance, such fineness of phrasing and such insurmountable difficulties of technique. Those who knew Earl and his father should, however, have had faith that he would not have attempted it if he could not have played it and played it marvelously well. It was played by a genius, of that there could be no doubt, a very rare genius. It cannot be described in words. The audience was most enthusiastic over the marvelous performance and called the lad back again. Then he played a beautifully dignified, almost spiritual "Aria" from Tenaglia, arranged by Franz Kneisel. Many a man and woman in the audience expressed the thought, "God grant this genius may be spared to grow in grace and skill for those future days when we shall all once more enjoy and appreciate peace!"

Yet, one is thankful to state that Earl is a real boy, whose happy face lighted up beautifully when one of his most appreciative listeners said to him, "Earl, it is a very wonderful and beautiful thing to give such pleasure to so many people!"

While Earl was, of course, the center of attraction at the concert at the First Presbyterian Church last evening, the evening's pleasure was greatly enhanced by the singing of Grace Harden, contralto. The singer possesses a contralto voice of sweetness and wide range, and he sings with sincere appreciation of her art. Her first group of songs, sung in either Italian or French, were all very enjoyable, the "Sonnet d'Amour" by Francis Thompson being full of power and dramatic effect.

In the last group she sang that weird, very difficult and tragic, "Women of Inver," by Loughborough, splendidly. The dashing, "My Love is a Muletier," by Francisco di Nogere was particularly charming. But perhaps the very best singing was by Miss Harden, who has a very pleasing personality, was the musical setting of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's "Dawn." It was beautiful.

This was the last number of a concert whose merits musically are scarcely to be estimated today. May the coming year hold for Earl such an increase in skill and vision as should from now on be his, and may he be given the health and strength to press forward to the goal of his high calling in the hearty wish of a host of friends of the little lad!

The accompanying of both the singer and the violinist as played by Mrs. Putnam Cady was in itself inspiring.

You Can Keep Old Glory Waving
If You Keep These Trucks Moving

GATHER AROUND ME, CHILDREN.
By AUGUSTIN McNALLY

I.

Do you see the trucks?
They are motor trucks.
Are they filled with food?
No, not these trucks.

These trucks were drawn by an artist to bring vividly (that is in life-like order) before our eyes one of the stern realities of this war, FOOD, and its relation to VICTORY. Food is brought to the soldiers in trucks like these. The artist desires to convey to our minds the thought that we, all of us at home, must keep the trucks moving in a long and uninterrupted procession. If there is but one brief halt, one little half-hour, due to our selfishness,—that halt may mean,—

Do you see the outline of that last one, the one away back yonder on the hill? Let your eyes travel downward, around the bend,—count them all. Notice the big one in the front, leading the way? It has just come out of the valley. It is steadily climbing the last hill this side of some army post somewhere in France. Look at the sides of these trucks. On each is painted in big letters the word FOOD.

II.

Now, children, if the artist had painted the word RELIEF on the sides of these trucks instead of FOOD he could not have brought to our minds more forcibly the truth of the claim made by Herbert Hoover that Food Will Win the War. Each one of these trucks is a relief messenger bringing nourishing food to your Big Brothers across the seas. Every soldier in the uniform of the U. S. A. is, indeed, your Big Brother, also every soldier wearing the uniform of France and Belgium and England and Italy and Canada and Australia. These Big Brothers are fighting for you and for me that both of us may live.

Not for themselves?

No, not for themselves. "For you and for me" means, in this war, for every man and woman and child thirsting to free the world of bad men. These bad men want to choke your Big Brothers in order that they (the bad men) may rule the world with a scourge of iron. Yes, children, they want to do that even to your own America, which has harmed no man.

III.

You don't want this to happen, do you?
You don't want to see your Big Brothers choked by an unmerciful enemy, do you?
Then you must help to drive the bad men back to where they came from—Prussia.

How shall you help?

By pleading for them,—your Big Brothers.

Say to your mother now, each of you:

"Mother, dear, are we doing everything we can do, I don't mean that we must do, I mean that we can do?"

Say to your Father, yes right now, all of you:

"Father I want to keep the relief trucks moving. I want to see ten thousand times ten thousand trucks, big trucks like these, going over to my Brothers on the firing line. I want to see tens of thousands more going over to feed my little cousins in Belgium and France and all my little cousins over there who must have food to live and hope. If you promise to eat no bread but war bread, and say you will not ask for as much beef as you used to, I'll, well I'll do anything you want me to do till my Big Brothers come back again. I want to help you now to Keep Old Glory Waving."

YOUR EARS, PARENTS, YOUR EARS!

KEEP THE TRUCKS MOVING. Save the wheat. Eat no wheat or wheat products, if you can do without them. Try, try.

Save the meat. Eat less today than you did yesterday.

Save the Sugar. Don't buy beyond your needs for thirty days. Don't hoard. Hoarding is sorrowful selfishness. It is the beginning of acute shortage. You are entitled to an extra amount these days for home canning. Don't permit this privilege to tempt you to do a wrong to your neighbor and your country.

The next wheat crop will be a big one,—but who knows what will be the size of the one to follow? Hoover wants to store some of the big crop against a lean year that may come. Help him, not for yourself, but for them.

KEEP THE TRUCKS MOVING.

GETTING THE FOOD ACROSS.

THE OBJECTORS.

It is stated that out of 1,300,000 men called for military service under the selective draft law only 600 have been tentatively classified as conscientious objectors. Those adjudged by a special tribunal to be sincere in their objection to service on the fighting line as against conscientious conviction will be assigned to duty elsewhere. It appears that in the past no few claiming exemption on this ground have been readily exposed as cheats by the draft board examinations, being either cravens seeking to run away in advance or persons too friendly to the Kaiser to desire to help in checking the progress of his war machine. Thus it is necessary to sift out the cowards and traitors before dealing with those who truly object from conscience.

The latter exist, but their number is relatively small. They are honest in their devotion to a misapplied or perverted principle and the government grants them the right. They need not fight, but in some way they must serve their country at war and discharge the debt owed by all. Such men have chosen a thorny path. The mere ordeal of establishing their claim and placing themselves apart from the cheats in their company must be very trying, and afterward, as they can hardly fail to realize, they must remain objects of the suspicion of a large part of their acquaintance. The lot of the "conscientious objector" is not enviable.

A USEFUL DECISION.

The Supreme Court has adjudged the Federal Child Labor law to be unconstitutional and void, on the ground that under the Constitution child labor is a matter for separate State regulation and is not within the jurisdiction of Congress. It is pointed out that every State already has a statute regulating the employment of children, their provisions differing more or less in accordance with differing social conditions and industrial demands but all agreeing that children ought not to be employed at any form of labor likely to hinder their mental, moral or physical development. It is held that, while as great a uniformity as possible is desirable, power to compel such uniformity is not conferred on Congress and the exercise of such authority "would sanction an invasion by the Federal power for the control of matters purely local." It is very pointedly argued that if Congress can assume power in this particular it can do so in many others of State and merely local concern.

While this decision can do no real injury to the cause of child labor reform, it can not fail to be wholesome as a reassertion of our fundamental law and of the necessary distinction between State and Federal power in our dual governmental structure. It provides a long needed check to those persistent devices whereby the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution has been wrenched from its original meaning and purpose with a view to transfer State police power to the Federal government. The very citadel of home rule is the powers reserved to the States, and to demolish this for the sake of some particular reform otherwise obtainable would be as insane as to cut off one's head in order to dispose of a pimple on one's nose.

PINNING IT ON PERSHING.

David Lawrence, who has been one of the most persistent defenders of the administration, not only in the daily press but in magazines, has at last realized the benefits derived from criticism, and has taken a turn at it himself. He discloses the fact that we are practically without airmen in France in which to house the airplanes we are to build and send over, and also short of aviation fields in the rear of the lines from which the airplanes can make advantageous starts. Says he: "Just why General Pershing has not earlier arranged for aviation fields is something for which his subordinate officers, to be sure, are responsible, but which the American people will naturally want to know about from the commander of the expeditionary forces."

Mr. Lawrence is apparently as far wrong in his initial attempt at criticism as he was when he tried to defend the administration against the censure of the press of the country. If it be true that Pershing has not arranged for aviation fields, it was probably because he saw no prospect of early receipt of aviation machines. What would be the use of preparing level grounds for airplane starts, only to have them shot full of shell holes before we are ready to use them?

But the article written by Lawrence, and quoted above, is useful. It will be noted that he proposes to hold Pershing responsible for any shortcomings of his subordinates—a policy he has not been inclined to adopt with regard to the subordinates of President Wilson. Mr. Lawrence is paying the way for some embarrassing applications of his new line of reasoning.

BAND CONCERT AT POINT ON SUNDAY

A great deal of interest is being shown in the band concert given by the Colonial Band, George H. Muller, director, at the Point on Sunday, and they are not only giving a great deal of pleasure, but are really inspiring. Last Sunday a fine program, well rendered, was enjoyed by a throng of visitors at this outing spot in the afternoon. The character of the program shows the serious trend of thought of the day, which is appealed to by music far less rampant than we have been hearing even from our bands of late. The following program for Sunday afternoon, tomorrow, is one that will give pleasure to all; such a quality of pleasure is given by really good music:

1. Star Spangled Banner.
2. Semper Paratus.
3. Post and Pasant Overture.
4. a. "Keep the Home Fires Burning."
- b. "Somewhere a Voice is Calling."
5. Selections from "Faust." (Intermission.)
6. Stars and Stripes Forever.
7. Processional from Tannhauser.
8. a. "The Morning" from Peer Gynt Suite.
- b. "The Death" from Peer Gynt Suite.
9. "Providence" (Sacred Selection.)
10. America.

MILK CAMPAIGN NEXT WEEK

Monday, June 10th, will open "Milk Week" in Ulster county. Other counties all over the state have been carrying on milk campaigns and now Ulster county is also to be lined up for a milk week. During this week an extensive and an intensive campaign, in the interest of the milk situation, not only of the present but the future, will be carried on here, under the auspices of the Ulster County Food Conservation Committee, with Mrs. A. E. P. Seering as chairman.

The churches, granges, women's clubs and organizations, moving picture houses, business firms, Chamber of Commerce, Dairyman's League, newspapers, Child Welfare Committee of the Woman's Home Defense, the Moran Business School, the Farm Bureau Association and the conservation committee throughout the county have all pledged their support in this movement and are already actively co-operating in the big milk drive.

What is it all about? Well, the milk situation in our county and in our country is a very serious one today, more serious than we have realized. People do not appreciate the food value of milk and therefore do not use as much milk as they should. If we are short-sighted and fail to use the foods that are plentiful and nourishing, we are surely inviting serious trouble to ourselves in these war times. In other words, if we do not use more milk than we have been using, considerable more the farmers will, as a result, be forced to slaughter the cows, in self-defense. That will mean that in the very near future we will be without the supply of milk which we need and which children and infants must have.

Many Foods are Good: No Food is Better Than Milk.

During milk week we want to make ourselves realize and help our neighbors to realize that milk is not merely a drink, but that it is a real food. At the present prices of all foods, it is a cheap food.

One quart of milk equals in energy value:

- Three-fourths of a pound of steak.
- Two pounds of chicken.
- 8 eggs.
- Two pounds of salt fish.

Milk is the very best meat substitute we have and we would be very much better off if we made milk save meat, especially during the coming summer season.

As a patriotic service to our country we should take it upon ourselves to arouse active interest in this milk question and urge more people to use milk.

WATCH WHAT IS TO HAPPEN IN MILK WEEK!

Ostriches Swift of Foot.

The competitive sports between individuals of the ostrich family are most interesting. With their powerful legs they are able to race as no other bird can. They are the race horses of the feathered kingdom. At an early age the young ostrich is taught to run races—a practice which prepares him for what he needs later in life in the way of self-protection through rapid pedestrianism. Many a race is run and honors won by young ostriches of the plains.

Cat Turned the Trick.

Psychology is playing a more and more important part in shop work. One Cincinnati manufacturer, who employed about twenty girls in a certain department, found that they quickly grew discontented and left him at the end of a week or two, complaining of the monotony of their tasks. The manufacturer laid the facts before a noted psychologist, who advised him to get a cat, put it in the room with the girls, and await results. It worked well.

Is Lightest Wood.
Sitka spruce, which takes from 70 to 80 years to mature, is light, compact, nearly odorless, light yellow and has scarcely distinguishable sap-wood. It has long been used for ship-building, masts, spars and by musical instrument makers for sounding boards. Douglas fir or spruce, great forests of which are found on the coast is also a favorite wood, but is somewhat heavier than the Sitka spruce.

TEMPERATURE AND TEMPER.
Here is a good old story that somebody has taken the trouble to dress up in khaki—or hospital blue:
Sister Anne was going the round of the ward in the big hospital for wounded soldiers, examining the medical charts over each bed and taking temperatures.

Reaching the side of one here, in whose mouth she had left the thermometer a minute ago, she was horrified to find, withdrawing it, that it registered 120, although only an hour ago the patient was normal. Swiftly she summoned the house doctor, but he, on arriving, was seriously perturbed, as there was nothing in the patient's condition to account for the sudden rise.

"Look here," he said to the soldier, "have you dropped this thermometer or been fooling with it?"

"No, sir. Only been stirring my tea with it!"

WOOD GRAPPLE SAVES WORK

The handling of logs by means of a crane equipped with a good grapple is not only more spectacular than the old method, but it effects an immense saving in labor and has made it possible to pile logs to a great height. Similar outfits are used in handling ties, posts, pulp wood, etc. The grapple is made like a clamshell bucket except that the scoops are replaced by curved steel tines. In the grasp of which a large number of logs can be held at once. Popular Mechanics Magazine.

THE OBJECTORS.

It is stated that out of 1,300,000 men called for military service under the selective draft law only 600 have been tentatively classified as conscientious objectors. Those adjudged by a special tribunal to be sincere in their objection to service on the fighting line as against conscientious conviction will be assigned to duty elsewhere. It appears that in the past no few claiming exemption on this ground have been readily exposed as cheats by the draft board examinations, being either cravens seeking to run away in advance or persons too friendly to the Kaiser to desire to help in checking the progress of his war machine. Thus it is necessary to sift out the cowards and traitors before dealing with those who truly object from conscience.

The latter exist, but their number is relatively small. They are honest in their devotion to a misapplied or perverted principle and the government grants them the right. They need not fight, but in some way they must serve their country at war and discharge the debt owed by all. Such men have chosen a thorny path. The mere ordeal of establishing their claim and placing themselves apart from the cheats in their company must be very trying, and afterward, as they can hardly fail to realize, they must remain objects of the suspicion of a large part of their acquaintance. The lot of the "conscientious objector" is not enviable.

A USEFUL DECISION.

The Supreme Court has adjudged the Federal Child Labor law to be unconstitutional and void, on the ground that under the Constitution child labor is a matter for separate State regulation and is not within the jurisdiction of Congress. It is pointed out that every State already has a statute regulating the employment of children, and that the law interfering more or less in accordance with differing social conditions and industrial demands but all agreeing that children ought not to be employed at any form of labor likely to hinder their mental, moral or physical development. It is held that, while as great a uniformity as possible is desirable, power to compel such uniformity is not conferred on Congress and the exercise of such authority "would sanction an invasion by the Federal power for the control of matters purely local." It is very pointedly argued that if Congress can assume power in this particular it can do so in many others of State and merely local concern.

While this decision can do no real injury to the cause of child labor reform, it can not fail to be wholesome as a reassertion of our fundamental law and of the necessary distinction between State and Federal power in our dual governmental structure. It provides a long needed check to those persistent devices whereby the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution has been wrenched from its original meaning and purpose with a view to transfer State police power to the Federal government. The very citadel of home rule is the powers reserved to the States, and to demolish this for the sake of some particular reform otherwise obtainable would be as insane as to cut off one's head in order to dispose of a pimple on one's nose.

PINNING IT ON PERSHING.

David Lawrence, who has been one of the most persistent defenders of the administration, not only in the daily press but in magazines, has at last realized the benefits derived from criticism, and has taken a turn at it himself. He discloses the fact that we are practically without airplanes in France in which to house the aeroplanes we are to build and send over, and also short of aviation fields in the rear of the lines from which the aeroplanes can make advantageous starts. Says he: "Just why General Pershing has not earlier arranged for aviation fields is something for which his subordinate officers, to be sure, are responsible, but which the American people will naturally want to know about from the commander of the expeditionary forces."

Mr. Lawrence is apparently as far wrong in his initial attempt at criticism as he was when he tried to defend the administration against the censure of the press of the country. If it be true that Pershing has not arranged for aviation fields, it was probably because he saw no prospect of early receipt of aviation machines. What would be the use of preparing level grounds for airplane starts, only to have them shot full of shell holes before we are ready to use them?

But the article written by Lawrence, and quoted above, is useful. It will be noted that he proposes to hold Pershing responsible for any shortcomings of his subordinates—a policy he has not been inclined to adopt with regard to the subordinates of President Wilson. Mr. Lawrence is paving the way for some embarrassing applications of his new line of reasoning.

MANAGERS ARE POPULAR.

Max Flack perpetrated an unassisted double play in a recent game, and that is a most unusual feat for an outfielder. With Herzog on first Kelly tied to the right fielder and Herzog was so certain the ball would fall safely that he started around the bases. He was at second when the catch was made, realized the futility of attempting to return to first and remained at the keystone while Flack ran in and touched the initial sack.

GIANT OUTFIELDERS ARE SHOWING CLASS

McGraw's Trio Should Make Good Record If Held Together.

George Burns, Benny Kauff and Ross Young Have Many Years of Baseball Ahead of Them—Fans Have Forgotten Robertson.

The regular outfield trio of the champion Giants is one of the classiest combinations gotten together in the National league in years.

There are several outfielders in the big show which may stack up as more deadly with the bats, but for all-around baseball ability you have to go a long way to beat George Burns, Benny Kauff and Ross Young.

First of all, each of these players has a good many years of baseball ahead of him, and if McGraw is lucky he should hold on to his triplets for three or four years at the very least.

Burns and Kauff were seasoned players when the season of 1918 opened. There was no doubt about their ability. But there was some doubt as to whether Ross Young could successfully fill the shoes left vacant by Davy Robertson. That doubt has been swept aside, for Young has made Polo Grounds fans forget Davy.

Young's style of handling himself in the field and at the bat is not unlike that of Burns and he hits hard and timely. He is a good judge of a fly ball and a good base runner, which is all McGraw could ask.

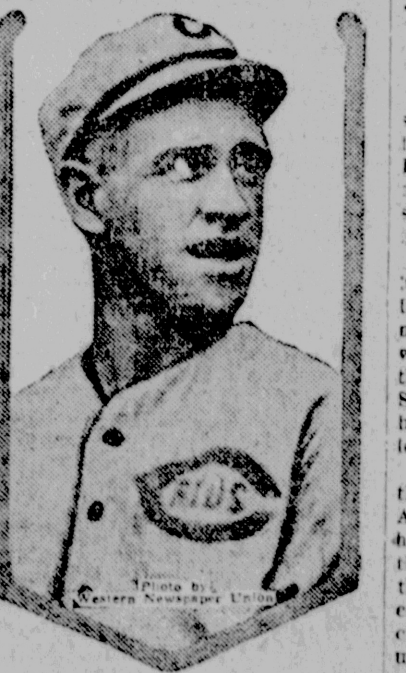

In left field George Burns ranks as one of the best players in the National league. There is no better sun filder than Burns and the fact that New York is the only big-league team he has ever played with proves his class. He came up once and has been up ever since.

Kauff, in center, is not the prettiest felder in the business, but he is reasonably sure. Benny traps a ball in a rather awkward-looking way, but he "gets 'em," and that is what counts. On the bases Benny is the best of the three, and if he realizes his ambition this season October will find him heading the batsmen of the mother circuit in place of Eddie Rousch, his former teammate in the Federal league.

FUNNIEST PLAY IS RECITED

Miller Huggins Tells of Peculiar Incident in Game Between Cardinals and Pirates.

Miller Huggins, the little New York pilot, was interviewed the other day and asked to recite the funniest play he had ever seen on a diamond. Here's the play: "It happened one day in a game between Pittsburgh and the St. Louis Cardinals, when Roger Bresnahan was manager. Mike Mowry was on first when Steve Evans hit a ball to right center. Mike started on the hit and after turning second saw the coacher at third base waving him to go back, as he thought the ball would be caught. Mike turned back and was running at full speed with his head down when Evans came along toward second base, also with head down. The two heads met and the two players went down and out. The ball was thrown in and both were tagged. They were out then sure."

HAL CHASE OF THE REDS
IN A CLASS BY HIMSELF

Though he is not the oldest first baseman in the national league, both in age and point of service, Hal Chase of the Reds still remains in a class by himself. Hal is 35, and no youngster is in sight who threatens to shear him of his honors.

HAS WON RESPECT OF ALL

British Working Man, "Making Good" as Soldier, Will Never Again Be Butt of Jesters.

What the poor citizen wants is not charity, or even sympathy, still less regulation; it is respect, which is the social soil of self-respect. That is why he is sometimes happier as a soldier, in spite of all the sickening horrors of soldiering, because humanity always has respected, and always will respect, a soldier.

Thus, Gilbert K. Chesterton, writing in the Illustrated London News, sums up an argument which, among its premises, contains the following:

"After all, it will be well to remember that nearly every battalion is a labor battalion. The commonest type in the trenches, the object of such wide and well-deserved praise in the press and the public speeches, is, after all, identical with another type—a common object of the streets and the comic papers. The British soldier is generally our old friend the British working man."

"He has lived by trades that are too often treated as merely grimy or grotesque; and in the case of new and almost crude conscript armies, like those we have lately raised, he has generally quite recently dropped those tools and left those trades. It is the plumber, who is charged with pottering about for days before he steps a small leak in a pipe, who has often in a few minutes stopped with his body the breach in the last dyke of civilization, lest it should let in a sea of savagery; and there may even be fewer jokes about his soldiering, now they can be answered by a pun about his soldiering. It is the cabman, who was supposed to grumble unduly at a very different sort of fare, and especially at the sort we call warfare."

HAS KEPT TOUCH WITH PAST

Old Tarrytown on the Hudson Refuses to Become Part of Modern Huette and Bustle.

Safely aloof from the rush and scramble which typifies Long Island today lies Tarrytown on the Hudson. The solidarity and leisurely prosperity of Tarrytown have kept it from being swept along with the stream of worldly progress. It has tarried.

It has kept its legends and traditions, its landmarks and historic buildings. It still likes to look at the monument marking the spot where Andre, the spy, was captured. It likes to recall with thrills of local pride "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," until it sees again the headless horseman pursuing the luckless Ichabod.

There are other specters of which the locality can boast, notably that of Andre, also on horseback, who can be heard at night riding at high speed up the road on which he was captured. At the fatal spot the sound of hoofs ceases, naturally enough, leaving the chance hearer to scuttle home with unseasonably haste.

Night is an excellent time to go sight-seeing in Tarrytown. There is the Sleepy Hollow graveyard, which no visitor would wish to miss, and which has an additional charm when viewed by moonlight. There is always the possibility that some illustrious resident of the place may come forth to take the air and wander once again to his old home or to the market place.

BAND CONCERT AT POINT ON SUNDAY

A great deal of interest is being shown in the band concert given by the Colonial Band, George H. Muller, director, at the Point on Sunday, and they are not only giving a great deal of pleasure, but are really inspiring. Last Sunday a fine program, well rendered, was enjoyed by a throng of visitors at this outdoor spot in the afternoon. The very character of the program shows the serious trend of thought of the day, which is suggested by music, and less than a year ago have been heard from out bands of late. The following program for Sunday afternoon, tomorrow, is one that will give pleasure to all, such a quality of pleasure is given by really good music:

1. Star Spangled Banner.
2. Semper Paratus.
3. Post and Prentice Overture.
4. a. "Keep the Home Fires Burning."
- b. "Somewhere a Voice is Calling."
5. Selections from "Faust" (Intermission.)
6. Stars and Stripes Forever.
7. Processional from Tannhauser.
8. a. "The Morning" from Peer Gynt Suite.
- b. "The Evening" from Peer Gynt Suite.
9. "Providence" (Sacred Selection.)
10. America.

MILK CAMPAIGN NEXT WEEK

Monday, June 10th, will open "Milk Week" in Ulster county. Other counties all over the state have been carrying on milk campaigns and now Ulster county is also to be lined up for a milk week. During this week an extensive and an intensive campaign, in the interest of the milk situation, not only of the present but the future, will be carried on here, under the auspices of the Ulster County Food Conservation Committee, with Mrs. A. E. P. Seering as chairman.

The churches, granges, women's clubs and organizations, schools, moving picture houses, business firms, Chamber of Commerce, Dayman's League, newspapers, Child Welfare Committee of the Woman's Home Defense, the Bureau of Education, the Farm Bureau Association and the conservation committee throughout the county have all pledged their support in this movement and are already actively co-operating in the big milk drive.

What is it all about? Well, the milk situation in our country and in our country is a very serious one today, more serious than we have realized. People do not appreciate the food value of milk and therefore do not use as much milk as they should. If we are short-sighted and fail to use the foods that are plentiful and nourishing, we are surely inviting serious trouble to ourselves in these war times. In other words, if we do not use more milk than we have been using, considerable more, the farmers will, as a result, be forced to slaughter the cows, in self defense. That will mean that in the very near future we will be without the supply of milk which we need, and which children and infants must have.

Many Foods are Good: No Food is Better Than Milk. During milk week we want to make ourselves realize and help our neighbors to realize that milk is not merely a drink, but that it is a food. At the present prices of all foods, it is a cheap food. One quart of milk equals in energy value:

- Three-fourths of a pound of steak.
 - 2 pounds of chicken.
 - 8 eggs.
 - 2 pounds of salt fish.
- Milk is the very best meat substitute we have and we would be very much better off if we made it a habit of using more milk during the coming summer season.

As a patriotic service to our country we should take it upon ourselves to arouse active interest in this milk question and urge more people to use milk.

WATCH WHAT IS TO HAPPEN IN MILK WEEK!

Ostriches Swift of Foot. The competitive sports between individuals of the ostrich family are most interesting. With their powerful legs they are able to race as fast as other birds. They are the race horses of the feathered kingdom. At an early age the young ostrich is taught to run and race—a practice which prepares him for what he needs later in life in the way of self-protection through rapid pedestrianism. Many a race is run and honors won by young ostriches of the plains.

Cat Turned the Trick. Psychology is playing a more and more important part in shop work. One Cincinnati manufacturer, who employed about twenty girls in a certain department, found that they quickly grew discontented and left him at the end of a week or two, complaining of the monotony of their tasks. The manufacturer laid the facts before a noted psychologist, who advised him to get a cat, put it in the room with the girls, and await results. It worked well.
